RE: RFP 25-07 City of Oceanside Youth Services

Dear Michelle Gehr,

The Native Pathways team thanks you and the City of Oceanside for providing our nonprofit organization with the opportunity to share our culturally responsive programming with Oceanside youth. As a 2024 recipient of funding through the Youth Services Initiative, we have created dynamic spaces for youth to connect with Native American and Indigenous artisans, cultural bearers, and educators.

Native Pathways provides a unique and critical intervention in youth programming that centers Indigenous perspectives, arts, and culture. Taking an Indigenous place-based approach literally grounds Oceanside youth in their communities and motivates them to reflect on their relationships with land, history, and family. Native Pathways believes in the importance of engaging youth with immersive experiences that foster cultural enrichment. Native Pathways programs and workshops have focused on providing hands-on learning experiences such as basket weaving, beadworking, and traditional Native foods processing. Several of our programs also include a Native American language component in partnership with a local Payómkawish/Luiseño language preservationist.

Taken all together, Native Pathways increases youth engagement and community connections with access to literacy, arts, history, and science through an Indigenous lens. We are eager to continue growing our community connections and offerings in Oceanside and seek $75,000 of support to do so over the period of July 2025-June 2026. Once again, we are grateful for the opportunity to share our vision with the Oceanside community and hope to continue nurturing our collaboration with the city's Youth Services Initiative.

Very Sincerely,

Olivia Chilcote, Ph.D.

Website: www.nativepathways.org

After witnessing a severe lack of Native American centered programming available in San Diego's North County, local Payómkawish/Luiseño educators and cultural practitioners Dr. Olivia Chilcote, Marlene Fosselman, and Rachel Fosselman founded Native Pathways to make a critical intervention. Native Pathways was established in 2024 as a nonprofit organization with 501(c)(3) status. As a nascent organization, we continue to build momentum in an effort to grow our program offerings that provide the public with access to Native American and Indigenous artisans, cultural bearers, and educators. The Native Pathways vision is as follows:

Native Pathways is a Native American led nonprofit organization dedicated to supporting Indigenous arts and cultural practices. Through public education and community development projects, Native Pathways uplifts Native American artists, cultural bearers, educators and creative professionals. We create community engaged spaces and programs that empower everyone to build resilient futures through ancestral wisdom.

Since Native Pathways' founding, our team has organized a wide array of programs and activities. Examples include: traditional Native American food processing, Native plant gathering, basketmaking, beadworking, mural painting, jewelry making, and gourd crafting. Native Pathways has also facilitated displays and workshops at various events hosted by entities such as the County of San Diego, The Old Globe in Balboa Park, and the San Pasqual Band of Mission Indians.

Our team's commitment to sharing our vision and uplifting Native American art and culture has earned praise and outside recognition. In March 2025, California Senator Catherine Blakespear honored Native Pathways Co-Founder and Program Outreach Coordinator Marlene Fosselman with a “Woman Who Inspires” recognition. Co-Founder Dr. Olivia Chilcote was similarly acknowledged with the distinguished “Shero Award” by the UNESCO Center for Peace of California and Baja for her accomplishments and community service. With the support and funding of the Oceanside Youth Services Initiative for 2024-25, Native Pathways is blossoming into one of the premier Native American led nonprofit organizations in San Diego County.

Executive Summary

There are more Native American tribes in San Diego County than any other county in the United States. San Diego County is also home to a large and very active Urban Indigenous population. Despite this significant presence, there remains a glaring absence of public understanding around contemporary Native American peoples, art, and culture. Native Pathways views this gap as a generative space of intervention where we can empower people of all ages and backgrounds to learn from and with Native American artists, educators, and cultural bearers. Building on decades of experience and connection with the Native American community throughout California, Native Pathways creates dynamic spaces for community members to engage with Native American art and culture. We believe that exposure to Native American cultural practices and artistic traditions is not simply about aesthetic appreciation, but rather it is a window into Indigenous worldviews and relationships to the land. Community engagement is the centerpiece of our vision as we work collaboratively to dismantle stereotypical understandings and reorient the public’s perception of Native American arts and culture.

Narrative

Native Pathways proposes a series of classes and workshops for middle and high school aged youth in Oceanside that center Native American art and cultural practices. Over the past six (6) months, Native Pathways has held multiple events for youth ages 10-18 throughout Oceanside and particularly at the Joseph Balderrama Park Recreation Center. For the 2025-26 period, we hope to expand our offerings to two (2) classes/workshops per month at various community and recreation centers throughout the City of Oceanside in collaboration with the city’s Parks and Recreation Department.

Native Pathways Proposed Schedule of Classes/Workshops
July 2025	Beginning of 4 part series (July & August) to construct and launch traditional tule boats into the ocean 1- tule gathering/processing 2- tule boat construction
August 2025	2nd half of tule boat series—

Native Pathways Proposed Schedule of Classes/Workshops
	1-finalize construction and 2- tule boat launch
September 2025	1-Native American beadwork keychain making 2-Abalone shell and pine nut necklace making

Native Pathways' proposed series of classes and workshops will all be taught by skilled Native American artists and cultural practitioners. In providing hands-on experiences for youth to engage with Native American culture, Native Pathways facilitates a deeper connection to the local Oceanside community and expands youth access to literacy, arts, history, and science through an Indigenous lens. Our Native Pathways instructors ensure that students are educated on the historical and cultural significance of Native American history and art, students are exposed to Native American languages and key terminologies, and engagement with Native plants provides exposure to Indigenous science (also known as Traditional Ecological Knowledge).

Staffing and Partners

The Native Pathways team and its partners bring decades of experience in Native American arts, culture, and education to our community enrichment programs. We are a Native American and woman led nonprofit organization committed to culturally responsive programming. Our core team consists of Dr. Olivia Chilcote, Marlene Fosselman, and Rachel Fosselman.

Dr. Olivia Chilcote is a Co-Founder of Native Pathways. Dr. Chilcote oversees the organization and ensures the integrity of Native Pathways' offerings are based in reciprocal relationships and respect for Indigenous peoples and tribes. She is a tribal citizen of the San Luis Rey Band of Mission Indians and an Associate Professor of American Indian Studies at San Diego State University. She earned her Ph.D. and M.A. in the Department of Ethnic Studies at UC Berkeley and her B.A. in the Department of Ethnic & Women's Studies at Cal Poly Pomona. Dr. Chilcote is the author of Unrecognized in California: Federal Acknowledgment and the San Luis Rey Band of Mission Indians (2024, University of Washington Press) and is the recipient of numerous awards for her commitment to community-based research. She is also on the Council of Leadership for the California Indian Studies and Scholars Association and serves in an advisory role for various entities including the University of California Office of the President and the California Department of Education.

Marlene Fosselman is a Co-Founder and Project Outreach Coordinator for Native Pathways. She is an enrolled citizen and former Tribal Council member of the San Luis Rey Band of Mission Indians. Drawing on her extensive personal connections, Mrs. Fosselman coordinates all programs and workshops for Native Pathways by seeking out skilled Native American artists and cultural practitioners. For her dedication to uplifting Native American art and culture in San Diego County, Mrs. Fosselman was honored as a "Woman Who Inspires" by California Senator Catherine Blakespear in 2025. Beyond her roles at Native Pathways, she is the co-owner of Native Klichu Frybread and Native Ink Clothing with her husband, Philip "P.J." Fosselman. Mrs. Fosselman is a former employee of the Vista Unified School District where she worked for over a decade, a proud mother of four children, and a grandmother.

Rachel Fosselman is a Co-Founder of Native Pathways. Ms. Fosselman descends from the Guavish and Huscapish clans of the Pechanga Band of Indians. She is a skilled artist who specializes in weaving crafts from basketry to crochet. Ms. Fosselman assists with project implementation and facilitation at all levels.

In addition to our core Native Pathways team, we have an extensive network of collaborators with whom we regularly work. Together, we bring the Native Pathways vision to life. Please visit our website (www.nativepathways.org) to learn more about our current educators and contributors.

Sustainability

As a recently established nonprofit organization, Native Pathways is building capacity towards sustainability. We have been very fortunate to receive funding and support from the City of Oceanside through the Youth Services Initiative which has helped our organization grow. Beyond the Youth Services Initiative, Native Pathways has received donations from individuals and from Blue Shield California. We actively seek out multiple grant opportunities and hope to secure additional funding to sustain our efforts and collaborations.

Evaluation

Native Pathways currently evaluates the impact of our programming through demographic information collection and feedback from our collaborators. We are in the process of creating a survey to be distributed at all classes and workshops to assess our participants' experience. In terms of demographics, we are particularly interested in finding out the race/ethnicity, gender, age, and grade/educational level of our participants. This data enables us to see participation from the Native and non-Native community in support of our vision to provide people of all ages and backgrounds with access to culturally informed enrichment opportunities with Native American educators, artists, and culture bearers. Qualitatively, feedback and comments from our collaborators at the various locations we host our programs has also been an important way to assess our impact from those who are most familiar with their own spaces and community members. Our work-in-progress survey instrument will be another way to evaluate our classes and workshops. We plan for the survey to ask questions that provoke reflection, such as: What was the most interesting part of today's class/workshop for you?; Did this class/workshop change or shift your understanding of Native American art and culture? If so, how?; and, How did this class/workshop connect to your own lived experiences? Analyzing responses to these kinds of open-ended questions enables us to see Native Pathways' impact and provides inspiration for ways to refine our interventions.

Budget

Please see the provided template and narrative for detailed information.

Native Pathways seeks to double the funding we received from the 2024 round of Youth Services grant opportunities. In 2024-25, we received $30,000. For the 2025-26 period, we propose $75,000 in funding to support and expand the progress we have made so far. Increasing the amount of funding we receive will enable Native Pathways to provide Oceanside youth with more opportunities to engage in cultural enrichment programs from an Indigenous perspective.
